Roll Tide Alumni!

The second issue of our new Alumni Newsletter focuses on financing your legal education.

AccessLex

AccessLex Institute is a nonprofit organization committed to helping you find your path from aspiring law student to practicing professional. AccessLex has several tools that will assist you with determining how you will pay for law school. You can access these tools on their website under the Tools and Resources section <https://www.accesslex.org/tools-and-resources>

Helpful Tools from AccessLex

Analytix

Analytix allows you to research and compare law school information with ease. With Analytix, you can select up to eight law schools for a direct, side-by-side comparison. Employment rates, outcomes, bar passage rates, and cost are all variables that can be explored and compared using this tool. Analytix

Ask EDNA

Ask EDNA is the new Education Network at AccessLex. Ask EDNA's tools and resources are all completely free to use! Here, you can find the MAX Pre-Law toolkit which is useful for Admissions and Financial Aid

Fee Waivers

Another way to assist with financing your legal education are fee waivers. LSAC is committed to reducing barriers for law school applicants, and their fee waiver program is part of this mission. LSAC's fee waiver program is designed to increase equity and access to legal education for those who are financially under-resourced. You can learn more about LSAC's fee waiver program on their website:

Candidate Referral Service (CRS)

You can qualify for unsolicited law school application fee waivers by registering with LSAC's Candidate Referral Service (CRS). This is another way to help save money when applying to law school.
